Spring in the Arctic

The northern part of Canada is in the Arctic Circle, and is home to wildlife that thrive on the snowy tundra. These include polar bears, arctic foxes, wolves, snowy owls, and reindeer. Winters here are long and difficult, with temperatures that can get as low as -50°C. But the snow doesn't last all year! Spring comes to the tundra in late May, and when the ice that covers Hudson Bay begins to melt, the polar bears will come out to play. They love to spend time in the fields of purple fireweed that bloom near Churchill, Manitoba in May and June. There are so many polar bears there that it is known as "The Polar Bear Capital of the World"!
